THE PROBLEM

The Jordan River is a valued resource used by many. Yet, the river poses many risks to those who live along it.

There is not always access to bathrooms along the river, so poor water quality due to human waste is a concern. The area is also impacted by soil erosion, damaged vegetation, and unmanaged, long-term camping.

Many living along the river are worried about displacement from their encampments.

In addition to basic needs like food, shelter, clean water, restrooms, and sanitation services, everyone needs safety and a sense of community to be resilient in troubling times.

Practicing stewardship of your environment can protect yourself, others, and the environment and create resilient communities.

WHAT TO DO
KEEP ENCAMPMENTS SMALL
Small encampments have a less visual impact than large ones and may have a negligible effect on the river's health. However, any digging into the river bank is prohibited. It reduces the stability of the river and can put you and others in danger.

KEEP ENCAMPMENTS CLEAN
Try to keep the area you are staying in just as it was when you arrived. Avoid sleeping on sensitive vegetation. Avoid the use of fires. Use designated fire pits or grills at a nearby park if you must use a fire.

PROPERLY DISPOSE OF ALL WASTE
Use bathrooms when possible. If bathrooms are closed, use a plastic bag or other means of transporting waste to trash cans. Burying waste is a hazard to your health and the health of the river.
