

Save Our Canyons is looking for an intern to help collect and disseminate information about efforts to take over public lands in the state of Utah, and across the West. Currently, there is not a lot of factual information help people understand the huge impacts of what essential equates to privatization of the public domain. A number of scholars and land managers have put out great information on this issue however it is not getting out into the masses. SOC's hope is that through an internship from an individual in the Environmental Studies program who has a foundation in environmental policy and best environmental practices to help communicate the facts surrounding this issue through web based multimedia efforts.

The intern will be responsible for researching, writing, summarizing, and publishing information to a website. Will be expected to attend meetings and work with some of our coalition partners. Some web design experience is preferred, but not necessary.

This is an exciting and relevant topic that will have ramifications on the future of land management not only in Utah, but across the Western US. An excellent opportunity for students interested in Environmental and land use policy.

We've had great students in the past and look forward to engaging with others.

To inquire, contact Carl Fisher at SOC.
